Woman beaten on 'a regular basis' for weeks: Police

Disturbing allegations.
Victim and accused were previously partners

JEREMY NOLAS

jeremy.nolas@metronews.ca

Police believe a woman was held captive for three weeks by a former partner at a northeast Calgary home, where she was beaten and sexually assaulted on a "regular basis."

The allegations Thursday startled neighbours along the 200 block of Skyview Springs Garden N.E., with many openly expressing confusion over how such a thing could happen in an area they generally regard as quiet and family-friendly.

Police have now laid five charges in relation to the incident against 28-year-old

Troy Jordan Lemke, including forcible confinement, sexual assault and assault causing bodily harm. It's believed he and the victim were in a relationship as late as March of this year, according to Staff Sgt. Mark Hatchette.

Police have also determined that other people had come and gone from the home during the alleged kidnapping ordeal. However, the crimes were first reported to police only on Wednesday by the victim herself, who had managed to escape the home and seek help at a nearby business.

Mo Assadi lives across the street from where it's alleged the victim was held and was watering his lawn Wednesday when a line of police cruisers swarmed the area.

"There was a helicopter circling overhead, too," he said. "It was like something you see on the news — I was shocked."

Other neighbours said Thursday that they'd frequently heard loud noises coming from the home but chalked it up to run-of-the-mill gatherings hosted by the young men they had witnessed living there.

Hatchette said police do not expect to lay charges against anyone else but did not rule out additional counts against Lemke.

"We've actually been interviewing lots of witnesses with regards to this incident and that's what's led us to the charges we've been able to lay at this time," he said.

Hatchette repeatedly declined to speculate on why no one reported the alleged kidnapping to police sooner.

'This is a battle where I don't see a finish line'

Impaired driving. Province to target young motorists, while Calgary police ramp up Stampede enforcement

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nola@metronews.ca

Police and provincial officials alike believe public perception of drinking and driving has shifted greatly over the past year, but neither group has plans to ease up on prevention efforts.

Metro reported this week that new statistics show a 46 per cent decline in alcohol-related fatal collisions over the first six months of tougher sanctions for impaired driving. Most notable of these is an automatic driving suspension for those caught behind the wheel with a blood-alcohol level of more than .08.

Reached on Thursday, Transportation Minister Ric McIver deemed the numbers a "good first step." He said a big target for the future is getting the message to youth right from the day they're awarded a driver's licence.

Enforcement debate

Solicitor general Jonathan Denis responded Thursday to comments by Wildrose justice critic Shayne Saskiw that the province is wasting money in court defending new impaired-driving legislation that would be better spent on added enforcement.

"He's wrong and misinformed," Denis said. "The stats show what we've said all along: This type of law reduces the number of alcohol-related fatalities and injuries on the road."

"This is a battle where I don't see a finish line," McIver added.

In Calgary, specifically, 15 people lost their lives last year in collisions where alcohol was a factor, and that rate appears to be holding fast this year, with seven people killed so far.

But Calgary police Const. Jim Lebedeff said there's been a consistent downward trend in the number of motorists caught impaired behind the wheel. The first six months of this year have seen a 13 per cent drop, compared to the same time period in 2012.

For the first time, city police have also begun daytime checkpoints during the Calgary Stampede, just as they did over the busy December holiday season.

"We actually have caught the odd one, believe it or not," Lebedeff said of the daytime enforcement. "But mostly, even with a ton of people being inconvenienced when we stop them, they are saying, 'It's great to see you guys out here.'"

Two serious injuries. Multi-vehicle crash sends six to hospital

Six people were taken to hospital, including two with serious injuries, following a crash involving at least five vehicles on the Cushing Bridge just before noon Thursday, according to officials.

"Two men — one in his 50s, one in his early 20s — both from one vehicle, were in serious but stable condition at the time of transport," said EMS spokesman Stuart Brideaux.

"The drivers and passengers of the other vehicles involved were also taken to the Foothills Hospital in stable, non-life-threatening condition."

The two seriously injured men were in a westbound linen truck that crossed over the centre median into oncoming traffic, resulting in a collision involving three eastbound vehicles.

A westbound semi also ap-

Police were still investigating the cause of the crash late Thursday afternoon.

Lab tests say a mysterious oily sheen that has covered a long stretch of the Athabasca River is most likely from algae.

Calgary author Taylor Lambert is asking Albertans to share their stories about the recent floods, as he's planning to write a book. KYLA SERGEJEW/CONTRIBUTED

Author plans book about Alta. floods

Seeking stories. Taylor Lambert is asking people to share their tales

Watching the news from Toronto as flood waters inundated his city left Taylor Lambert feeling helpless.

The Calgary author was on tour for his recent book when Southern Alberta was overcome with water last month.

"I'm from here, my friends and family are here. I was hearing stories from people and I wasn't able to do anything," he said.

"The idea didn't come to me until a little while later that this could be an opportunity to chronicle a really important moment in the city's history."

Since returning home in early July, Lambert has set out to find flood victims, volunteers, city and provincial staff, and maybe even Mayor Naheed Nenshi to help narrate the story.

"How I want to tell this

Countdown

Lambert said he hopes to have the book completed within the next year, possibly to coincide with the one-year anniversary of the flooding.

is telling the bigger story through a handful of perspectives," he said. "There's no shortage (of stories), it's just trying to get people to come forward. I'm hoping to find (people) who are representative of the whole story."

As a former journalist, Lambert is no stranger to story-telling; however, his book Leaving Moose Jaw is a travel memoir about his time spent in India, so he said writing this book will be a bit of a departure from his last.

"It's definitely a big project."

Anyone who would like to share their story with Lambert can contact him at taylor.lambert@gmail.com or via Twitter @TS_Lambert.

High River. State of emergency to be lifted despite pushback: Redford

Alberta Premier Alison Redford confirmed Thursday that a state of emergency in flood-stricken High River would be lifted on schedule.

The emergency declaration came into effect almost immediately after the town was swamped three weeks ago and the plan has been to lift the order Friday.

Redford also said the province is handing control of High River back to its town council.

She said provincial support will remain for the community of 13,000, which had to be entirely evacuated when floodwaters hit.

"We are not going anywhere," she said at a news conference in High River. "This is only another phase. We're in it for the long haul."

"There's no magic that having a provincial state of emergency in place ... will speed up things tomorrow," she said.

Opposition

The premier and the opposition disagree on how to move forward in the devastated High River area.

- Opposition Wildrose Leader Danielle Smith, who is from High River, had wanted the legislature reconvened so the province could extend the state of emergency.

- While Premier Alison Redford said there's no need for that.

Mayor Emile Blokland said Redford and her government "have been there" for the town and it's time to move ahead.

"Tremendous progress has been made in High River," he said. "We know the amount of work that lies ahead."

'Triple whammy' hits artists

Sculptor Jen Sommerville stands with her daughter Hazel in their Bowness garage, which was formerly an art studio that was severely flooded and destroyed last month. KATIE TURNER/METRO

Flood aftermath.

Website aims to assist flood-impacted artists, some of whom lost their home, studio and storage space all at once

Like many residents of Bowness, Jen Sommerville lost her basement when flood waters ravaged her community, but the local artist also lost her studio space and in turn, her livelihood.

Sommerville, a multi-media sculptor, had built a working space in the home, as well as a shop in her detached garage. Both were destroyed during last month's flood, along with several of her pieces, and a piece of glass-blowing equipment that took her two years to build.

Lemonade out of lemons

"The only option I have is to be positive."

Jen Sommerville on trying to make the best of a bad situation

"I've lost a lot of my work," she said, adding the force of the water was so great that it actually blew a hole through their foundation.

Sommerville estimates the damages to her home and studio is more than $70,000.

Incoming president and CEO of Calgary Arts Development (CADA) Patti Pon said stories like Sommerville's were the impetus behind launching a new website, albertaartsrebuilt.ca.

"Individual artists where their home, their studio and their storage space for their artwork were all one in the same, they got the triple whammy," she said.

Pon said the website will be a co-ordinated area for organizations and groups to get information about flood recovery and funding.

Thus far, well over $150,000 has been raised, though Pon said they estimated the funding need is around $3 million.

Despite the loss, Sommerville said she's looking toward the future and even plans to utilize the thick silt that covered her home in "flood art."

First-degree murder charges. McCann suspect to go directly to trial

A man charged in the disappearance of an Edmonton-area couple just over three years ago will go straight to trial.

Crown prosecutors have decided to skip a preliminary hearing for Travis Vader, who is charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

Michelle Davio, a spokeswoman for Alberta Justice, says after a careful review, the Crown decided it was in the public's interest to proceed by direct indictment.

It's expected that Vader will be arraigned at a court hearing next month.

Lyle and Marie McCann of St. Albert disappeared in July 2010 while heading to a family gathering in British Columbia.

A burnt-out motorhome belonging to the McCanns was found west of Edmonton two days after they were last seen, but their bodies have never been found. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Festival cancelled due to flooding could lose $200K

Cancellation of a Calgary music festival due to the Calgary flood cost organizers hundreds of thousands of dollars, their website stated Thursday.

Sled Island music festival was set to host dozens of acts at more than 38 venues around the city over a four-day period at the end of June.

Extensive flood damage across the city and the subsequent state of emergency in Calgary forced the cancellation. On the sledisland.com website, organizers indicated the total loss could be up to $200,000.

The site said the festival is planned to resume in 2014. METRO

Even now, the water having receded, I've seen countless rumours that are not only untrue; they could really hurt businesses and communities that could already be struggling to survive. Folk Fest? Still on. The highway to Canmore and Banff? Clear and ready for our businesses. Campgrounds in the Rockies? More are open than you would think.

Remember when we were kids, our teachers would have us play a game called Telephone: One person would whisper something to the person beside them, then that person would whisper what they think they heard to the person beside them.

This would continue until the message had been passed around the entire circle, at which point the no-doubt misconstrued message would be shared publicly, thus showing how quickly inaccurate rumours could spread.

Besides allowing that kid who always had sticky fingers to invade your personal space, it was supposed to instil the point that we can never really trust what we hear, unless we experience it for ourselves.

When the floods were at their worst, I saw people tweeting that both the Peace Bridge and the River Café had been swept away by the Bow's raging waters. Since I live just around the corner, I hopped on my bike to go and take photos and see for myself.

Luckily, it didn't take long to prove that these tweets were nothing more than just terrible rumours. While some people probably thought they were helping to spread vital information, others most likely knew that the only thing they were doing was causing trouble. Imagine being the owner of the River Café and hearing that your livelihood was floating down the Bow River, especially when it wasn't true.

As helpful as social media has been over the past couple of weeks, especially when it comes to volunteer initiatives and fundraising drives, retweets and shares can sometimes be just as detrimental. Like spreading second-hand information, a simple click on your phone or computer can cause others a lot of stress.

Even now, the water having receded, I've seen countless rumours that are not only untrue; they could really hurt businesses and communities that could already be struggling to survive. Folk Fest? Still on. The highway to Canmore and Banff? Clear and ready for our businesses. Campgrounds in the Rockies? More are open than you would think.

For the past three weeks, if you've read my columns, you've probably noticed that they've had a similar theme. (besides the supposed grammatical errors). They've all been about support. Supporting your neighbours, standing behind strangers, bolstering businesses: this is how we can actually be helpful.

Let's leave the games to the kids, shall we?

Oath to the Queen of Canada 'repulsive'

Citizenship. Would-be Canadians challenge requirement to pledge allegiance to Elizabeth

Forcing would-be Canadians to pledge allegiance to the Queen before they can become citizens is discriminatory and a violation of their rights, three permanent residents are set to argue in court on Friday.

The Citizenship Act requires applicants for citizenship to swear or affirm they will be "faithful and bear true allegiance to Queen Elizabeth the Second, Queen of Canada, her heirs and successors."

The requirement "effectively bars" the applicants from enjoying citizenship rights such as voting or obtaining a Canadian passport given their constitutionally protected beliefs, their application to Ontario Superior Court states.

Michael McAteer, one of three disgruntled would-be citizens.
CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the applicants, Michael McAteer, says his father was persecuted in Ireland for supporting Irish independence.

"Taking an oath of allegiance to a hereditary monarch who lives abroad would violate my conscience," McAteer says.

Simone Topey says swearing allegiance to the Queen — whom Rastafarians regard as the "head of Babylon" — would violate her beliefs.

Dror Bar-Natan maintains the Queen is a symbol of entrenched privilege and taking the oath would be "repulsive."

For its part, the federal government argues that the three are in Canada voluntarily, and their political and religious views enjoy constitutional protections.

That they cannot have the "convenience" of a Canadian passport or the right to vote is a small price to pay for adhering to their principles.

"It is not constitutionally inconsistent that the applicants who find Canada's foundational democratic political structure to be 'repugnant,' at least in parts, are not accorded the right to vote within that political system," it states.

"The inability to enjoy the benefits of citizenship ... are amongst the costs reasonably borne by individuals whose personal beliefs run counter to Canada's foundational heritage." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Drug trade. Canadian crooks deal directly with Mexican mobsters: RCMP

Canadian organized-crime groups have forged links with Mexican outlaws in an attempt to secure a direct supply of cocaine and increase their profits by eliminating the middleman, the RCMP says.

An internal analysis by the Mounties notes that since 2008 at least 10 Canadians have been shot or killed in Mexico under circumstances suggesting involvement with local criminal elements.

Some were known to be active in drug trafficking in Canada and all had extensive criminal backgrounds, the RCMP analysis says.

A copy of the May 2012 assessment — heavily censored — was released under the Access to Information Act.

The murder in Mexico of several Canadians with criminal connections may signal that Canadian disputes and retaliatory actions are making their way south — contrary to the popular perception that drug-cartel frictions are migrating north, the RCMP's companion report says.

Decriminalization

Pot petition goes official in B.C.

An activist in B.C. has been granted approval to launch an official petition in an effort to decriminalize pot.

Elections BC will issue the petition on Sept. 9, after which Dana Larsen has 90 days to get the signatures of 10 per cent of voters in each of B.C.'s ridings.

If he achieves that, a legislature committee could choose to either send the matter to the legislature for a vote or call a referendum.

New figures show National Defence has not spent billions set aside for it during the last budget year, a trend some consider deficit slashing by stealth.

People comfort each other outside an emergency shelter in Lac-Mégantic, Que., on Thursday. Some locals have fond recollections of their dealings with the train driver at the centre of the investigation. JACQUES BOISSINOT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Train engineer a hero or criminal?

Lac-Mégantic disaster.

Man hailed for valiant actions now suspended and under suspicion

Leave him alone

"I imagine it's not his fault. In the meantime, he needs support — he doesn't need harassment.... And if it's his fault, listen, he will pay for it, for sure."

Taxi driver Andre Turcotte, who has transported engineer Tom Harding from the train to the inn once or twice a week for the past four months.

His face gripped with terror, the train driver sprang out of bed at the inn where he'd retired for the night and raced to the scene of an impending catastrophe.

Residents of Lac-Mégantic, Que., painted a portrait Thursday of the friendly railman who chatted with locals during his regular stopovers in town.

An employee at the inn says she thinks she was looking into his eyes the instant he realized his unmanned, crude-oil-filled train had just slammed into the downtown core.

The train driver, Tom Harding, now finds himself at the centre of the investigation into a derailment disaster now feared to have killed 50 people.

His boss has said he could face criminal charges. The chairman of the rail company has suspended Harding without pay amid concerns that he might not have properly applied the brakes on the tanker train.

The company had initially described Harding as a hero for apparently rushing to the scene where he managed to pull some of the explosive rail cars away from the flames.

A taxi driver met Harding on Friday night at the spot where he parked the train before it roared into town. He said his regular customer seemed fine.

However, Andre Turcotte

did say that the train appeared to be belching out more smoke than usual, so much so that he recalled oil droplets from the exhaust landing on his car.

He said he asked Harding twice about the smoke. Turcotte said his client calmly responded that he had followed company directives to deal with it. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Updates

Locals head home as first victim named

Police released the first name of a victim on Thursday: 93-year-old Elianne Parenteau. Most of the bodies have not been found or identified.

Much of the local anger has been directed at the company, Montreal, Maine & Atlantic Railway.

Quebec Premier Pauline Marois called MMA's handling of the crisis "deplorable." The local mayor says she's angry at the company boss for cancelling a meeting with her.

Another 600 Lac-Mégantic residents are being allowed home. Quebec civil security spokeswoman Christine Savard said that means only about 200 people of 2,000 who were forced out won't be back home by the weekend. THE CANADIAN PRESS

We liked their early stuff better? Belugas to see another concert

Two Winnipeg artists are on the northernmost edge of Manitoba this summer to organize a concert series that promises to really whale.

Laura Magnusson and Kaoru Ryan Klatt left for Churchill last week with a specialty crafted "sculptural sea vessel" — complete with a stage and an underwater speaker system — to stage performances for thousands of beluga whales on the Churchill River estuary.

"We're fostering ties between humans and belugas," explained Magnusson, who's travelled with Klatt to Churchill for the past two summers to sing and talk to whale pods.

"This is the last hurrah."

Walmart denies firing woman over dog rescue

Hot dog. Former employee says she was told she was fired for 'being rude to a customer'

JOE LOFARO
Metro in Ottawa

Following an incident where one its employees in Kemptville, Ont. was fired after confronting a customer who left his dog in a car on a hot morning, Walmart Canada says it will install signs in its parking lots across Canada warning shoppers about the dangers of leaving children and pets in hot vehicles.

Carla Cheney with her dog Chico
JOE MORIN/METROLAND NEWS SERVICE

Walmart Canada issued a statement on its Facebook page just before noon Thursday saying that it is a major supporter of animal rights and denying the termination was over the employee's move to confront the customer.

"We want you to know that the associate in question was absolutely not let go for trying to help a dog in a locked car. The decision to dismiss an associate is one that we take extremely seriously and must follow a comprehensive process," the statement said. "As per our protocol, the store manager did speak to the customer in question about the dangers of leaving a dog in a hot car."

The former employee, Carla Cheney, a pharmacy technician, said she called police Tuesday when she saw a man leave his dog in a truck in the parking lot. She said the SPCA had advised her to call 911 after a similar incident that happened at the store a week earlier.

Top court to hear cell privacy case

Ottawa. Man arrested for armed robbery says police breached his rights by examining his phone

The Supreme Court of Canada is taking on the question of whether police can access information on a cellphone that isn't protected by a password.

The court has agreed to hear an appeal from Kevin Fearon, who was arrested after an armed robbery in Toronto in 2009.

Police obtained photos of a gun and cash, as well as a text message about jewelry, after taking a closer look at Fearon's phone, which was unlocked. After he was convicted, Fearon appealed, arguing that police breached his rights when they examined the phone after his arrest.

The Ontario Court of Ap-

No explanation

- As usual, the Supreme Court justices gave no reasons for agreeing to hear the case.
- Kevin Fearon also appealed over the issue of access to a lawyer, saying he was left in an interview room for five hours without an opportunity to contact counsel.
- The Supreme Court, however, said the appeal will be limited to the cellphone issue.

peal said it was all right for the police to look through the phone in a cursory fashion to see if there was evidence relevant to the crime, but after that they should have stopped to get a search warrant.

Had the phone been password-protected or otherwise locked to anyone other than its owner, "it would not have been appropriate" to look through the phone without a search warrant.

The appeal judges referred to a decision in a murder case in which the judge did not allow evidence from a personal electronic device because it "functioned as a mini-computer," which has a high expectation of privacy.

The contents of that device were only extracted by a police officer using specialized equipment, the judges noted.

"There was no suggestion in this case that this particular cellphone functioned as a 'mini-computer,' nor that its contents were not 'immediately visible to the eye,'" the court said in its ruling.

"Rather, because the phone was not password-protected, the photos and the text message were readily available to other users." Defence lawyer Sean Robichaud said that approach failed to take into account the amount of information many people keep on their cellphones these days.

Royal-kid kitsch. Souvenir makers ready for mad dash

Souvenir plates to mark the forthcoming birth of a baby for Prince William and his wife Kate, Duchess of Cambridge, stand on display in a shop in central London on Wednesday. SANG TAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a royal bonanza — but for Britain's souvenir makers, also a royal headache. The upcoming birth of Prince William and his wife Kate's first child is a golden opportunity that comes with a mystery: The name and gender of the baby.

While merchants have known for months that the future heir to the throne is due in mid-July, they'll be sent into a mad dash to create, or at least put finishing touches on, royal baby memorabilia.

Sophie Allport, a designer of fine bone china, is one manufacturer waiting for the future monarch's name to send her commercial plans into motion. She has thousands of pre-orders for hand-crafted commemorative mugs but can't fill them until the baby's name can be etched on the rims.

She's as ready as she can possibly be — having prepared both blue and pink designs depending on whether it's a prince or princess. "We've never done something like this so I hope it works," said Allport, whose designs, once finished, will be scanned, mailed or even driven by courier to the city of Stoke-on-Trent, the centre of Britain's ceramic industry.

2 key execs leave BlackBerry

BlackBerry says two executives who played significant roles in the new smartphone launch have left the company.

T.A. McCann was vice-president of social networks at BlackBerry and oversaw operations of its BlackBerry Messenger service and other apps.

Marc Gingras handled the research and development of BlackBerry 10 email, calendar and contacts applications, and its integration into the new BlackBerry Hub. "We wish them all the best in their future endeavours," the company said in a short statement.

Both men, who left the company amicably over the past month, became BlackBerry employees through the Waterloo, Ont.-based company's acquisition of startups.

McCann was the founder of social calendar company Gist, acquired in 2011. When he joined BlackBerry he became responsible for the integration of third-party apps like Twit-

1 Pocketful o' change. Stephen Harper's cabinet shuffle reminds me of a time when you could take a $50 bill and change it into a stack of $1 and $2 bills so that you felt a little bit richer. Even though you still only had $50.

2 Cool cats. Last December, a man in Windsor, Ont., was found with 155 dead cats in his freezer. This week, Jerry Miernecki pleaded guilty and was banned from owning more than one animal, which must be spayed or neutered. And one year probation, because they'll want to keep an eye out for odd behaviour.

3 Miseducation. Remember Lauryn Hill? The reclusive Fugees star left showbiz in 2000 due to the overwhelming pressure, but collected over $1.5 million US in royalties between 2005 and 2007 for which she failed to file income tax. Hill is serving a three-month prison sentence, followed by 90 days of house arrest concurrent with one-year parole. And, on top of that, all of her pets must be spayed or neutered.

Perseverance powers helicopter

AEROVELO/HANDOUT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto team takes international prize

Two Toronto engineers have just finished setting up their prize-winning helicopter that is powered by Todd Reichert's powerful legs pedalling a bicycle.

Since 1980, a challenge to engineers across the world — to build a human-powered helicopter, capable of sustaining three metres of flight for 60 seconds — had remained unclaimed.

Teams of engineers from Japan to the U.S. came close, but not close enough. Only Reichert's team has fulfilled the seemingly impossible feat, earning it a $250,000 prize Thursday. The award-winning flight took place in June, after 18 months for the University of Toronto alumni to build and fine tune the project. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Specs

- It measures nearly 47 metres across, but is also surprisingly light for its size, at just 54 kilograms.
- The lightweight nature of the frame, made largely of carbon fibre tubes that connect four rotors to a central bike, is a necessity.

Synopsis

Grown Ups 2 picks up where the last movie left off. Lenny (Adam Sandler) has relocated his wife (Salma Hayek) and kids back to his hometown to be closer to friends and family. It's the last day of school, and as the kids are packing up their books, their fathers (Kevin James, Chris Rock, David Spade) grapple with growing up, growing old and a gang of frat boys (lead by Twilight's Taylor Lautner) who think the four old friends are way over the hill.

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Adam Sandler's comedy Grown Ups 2 opens this weekend. HANDOUT

It's more number two than it is number one

New movie. In the sequel to Grown Ups, the comedy doesn't grow into anything and remains a series of juvenile jokes and potty humour

Richard: Mark, the old saying, "They got bigger, but they didn't grow up," perfectly applies to this new Sandler and Company movie. It's 90 minutes of middle-aged men, urination gags (too many to count) and cleavage shots. So while the actors may have matured (chronologically at least) the jokes haven't. Question is: is it funny? I didn't really think so, although I have to say Shaquille O'Neal's big-guy-Andre-the-Giant shtick made me laugh. You?

Mark: No, I didn't laugh. But let's examine the inventory. Chris Rock may be the funniest stand-up working today, but as a movie star, he's never done anything much worthwhile.

David Spade: Tommy Boy was a long time ago.

Sandler: Well, I only find him funny when he's trying to be serious.

There is only one movie genius here — I'm not kidding — and it's Kevin James. He's the only one of the bunch that can convincingly play a regular guy and not come off like a slumming millionaire. And even then, not in this turkey.

Also you might have to wonder about any sequel that Rob Schneider passes on.

RC: I wondered where Schneider's character was. I guess some friendships don't last forever. I can't say I didn't laugh at all.

James' deadpan dumb kid who can't add or spell is a pretty funny running gag but for a movie about growing up, it was all so juvenile. I didn't expect a searing meditation on aging but I did think they might touch on the fact that they were growing old with more smarts than lines like, "I used to buy 10 cases of beer for my parties, now I get 10 cases of juice boxes."

MB: A good line. I snorted in recognition. And I grudgingly laughed a bit at a few sight gags, like the exploding life raft and some of the '80s outfits at the party finale. But generally, the humour aims too low. But I liked it — if I can use the word — more than the first one. At least it had some nice callbacks and weird twists of coincidence. And it had a lazy summer quality about it, probably the result of lazy screenwriting, acting and direction.

RC: I like silly movies, I just wish it was silly and about something other than a moose urinating on Sandler's unsuspecting family, and by extension, the audience.

MB: We should all feel lucky. In the first draft of the script, it was the other way around.

What's in store at summer's hottest comic book geek-fest

Comic-Con. The annual event showcases the latest in film, TV and general geekery

Metro World News in Hollywood

July means one thing for the entertainment industry: Comic-Con. Here's what we're geeking out over this year at the annual pop culture smorgasbord in San Diego.

IN FILM

Marvel: The comic book movie juggernaut never ceases to impress in San Diego, and hopefully this year will be no different. We're looking for updates on Avengers 2 as well as the upcoming Captain America and Thor sequels. Plus, wouldn't it be awesome if they brought out the whole cast of Guardians of the Galaxy, their bizarre new super-team movie?

X-Men: Days of Future Past: It feels like it's been forever since Fox has mounted a Hall H presentation for Comic-Con, but this year they're back. Mum is the word on what will be presented, but we have it on good authority something will be done to celebrate the impending release of the Wolverine. More importantly, we're hoping for an update from Bryan Singer on his return to the X-Men franchise.

Godzilla: With Pacific Rim putting giant, city-destroying monsters back in people's minds, the time is right to reintroduce the original kaiju, Godzilla. The reboot, starring Aaron Taylor-Johnson, Ken Watanabe and Elizabeth Olsen, has just started filming, so hopefully there will be some monster-sized surprises in store.

IN TV

Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D.: We may have to wait until summer 2015 for Avengers 2, but Marvel is helping make that wait go faster with this TV spin-off, overseen by Joss Whedon himself. It's easily our most anticipated show of the fall season. And maybe we'll finally learn how Clark Gregg's Agent Coulson — who appeared to have perished in the Avengers — factors into the new show.

Doctor Who: We're halfway through the venerable British sci-fi series' 50th anniversary, so expect big things — especially with current Time Lord Matt Smith bowing out later this year. That makes this his last Comic-Con as Doctor Who, so hopefully he'll make the most of it.

Hannibal: Fans of this dark and twisted drama had to wait a tortuously long time for NBC to give it a second season renewal — coming weeks after other series got the green light — so both fans and executive producer Brian Fuller have plenty of reason to celebrate at the show's first panel.

IN GENERAL GEEKERY

Nerd HQ: Chuck star Zachary Levi's Nerd Machine's, a party space devoted to all things nerdy, is back and moving to much bigger digs at Petco Park for a slew of dance parties, celebrity panels and gaming demos. Maybe next year they'll just take over the whole convention centre.

Wired Café: Wired magazine's Comic-Con oasis celebrates its fifth year of offering attendees a respite from the geeky madness with food, drink and gadgets galore. Though, given the level of treachery on the hit HBO series, maybe we'll skip the drinks at the Game of Thrones bar.

The costumes: Celebrities and major movies are nice and all, but what really makes Comic-Con special is the hordes of fans who descend on San Diego — especially the cosplay folks, donning incredibly accurate recreations of character costumes from comics, cartoons and TV. We'll be keeping an eye out for the most creative.

What about Star Wars?

Fans will have to wait

Hey, isn't the new Star Wars movie coming out soon? Wouldn't Comic-Con be the perfect place to do some unveiling? You would think, but every other year Disney — the new parent company in charge of all things Star Wars — has its own summer to-do, the D23 Expo, in August. With D23 looming, it's no surprise the studio will have no presence at Comic-Con aside from its Marvel panel presentation. So fans of the Force will have to wait another month for news on the first of a new series of films in a galaxy far, far away...

A modern twist

Superheroines get a hipster makeover

Artist Elizabeth Beals (society6.com/ElizabethBealsPrints) is giving superheroines a modern look by turning them into their hipster selves. The illustrations of the DC female protagonists — Diana Prince (Wonder Woman), Harleen Quinzel (Harley Quinn) and Selina Kyle (Catwoman) — look like they would be at home in an episode of Girls. While to the naked eye they may seem like your average 20-something, little nods to their super personalities present a fun new take on these classic characters.

Conjuring up old-school horror

Patrick Wilson. The actor chats with Metro about his latest horror flick, which was a throwback to the '70s

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

When it comes to discussing contemporary horror movies, "restraint" isn't usually a word that comes up too often.

But it's one that actor Patrick Wilson keeps coming back to when describing how director James Wan (Saw, Insidious) approached The Conjuring, based on a case file by real-life paranormal investigators Ed Warren (Wilson) and Lorraine Warren (Vera Farmiga).

The irony doesn't escape Wilson that Wan is at least partially responsible for the current state of horror, but against that backdrop, The Conjuring — presented as if it were released during its early 1970s setting — is a throwback in the best possible way.

This movie is seriously terrifying.

Yeah, the movie's no joke. I watched it again last night, and my friend who was with me — who had also seen it with me before — jumped more this time than he did the other time. I kept looking over at him like, "But you know what's coming." I would even look at him right before something happened, and he would look at me like, "I know," and then he'd look back at the screen and he'd still jump.

There's a lot of restraint in how the film sticks to its time period, feeling very much in odd "groovy" that the kids say — which they would — and I think it gives people a little frame of reference, but it's not blatant.

It's refreshing to see the older style of making scary movies is still effective.

No disrespect to horror movies from the past 15 years, but when people say, "What are the great horror movies?" you're always drawn to the Exorcist — that movie always comes up as one of maybe three or four that are arguably the best. Those are movies that are rich in character and not overly graphic. The violence is used appropriately, the blood is used appropriately. And I think James has a real affinity for that, which I always admired, especially coming from Saw. He almost started this whole movement, I feel like, with the shock and the gore and everything. But one of the things that struck me about (our previous collaboration) Insidious was the complete opposite of that. And now he's just really hit his stride.

Science Fiction

Pacific Rim

Director. Guillermo del Toro

Stars. Charlie Hunnam, Idris Elba, Rinko Kikuchi

Director Guillermo del Toro has made an end-of-the-world scenario fun. In Pacific Rim the planet is threatened by Kaijus, colossal beasts with an appetite for destruction. Giant robots called Jaegers, operated by pilots like Raleigh Becket (Charlie "Sons of Anarchy" Hunnam) are the last hope to fight the beasts and save the world. Add to that Ron Perlman in a colourful cameo, huge-scale martial arts and some crazy Roger Corman-esque science theories and you have a geek freak-out that transports you back in time to wherever you saw your first Godzilla movie.

RICHARD CROUSE

Comedy/Drama

Frances Ha

Director. Noah Baumbach

Stars. Greta Gerwig, Mickey Sumner

The seventh film from Greenberg director Noah Baumbach isn't so much a traditional narrative as it is a character study of Frances (Greta Gerwig), an underemployed dancer struggling to find herself in New York City. It plays like a cleaned up black-and-white version of Girls — an emotionally rich and funny portrait of 20-something ennui. The supporting cast (including Girls star Adam Driver) is strong, but this is Gerwig's movie. Once again — after films like Lola Versus and Arthur — she hands in an authentic, affecting and purely wonderful performance. RICHARD CROUSE

Man! I feel like a woman

"It was at that moment I had an epiphany, and I went home and started crying. Talking to my wife, I said 'I have to make this picture,' and she said, 'Why?' And I said, 'Because I think I am an interesting woman when I look at myself on screen. And I know that if I met myself at a party, I would never talk to that character because she doesn't fulfil physically the demands that we're brought up to think women have to have in order to ask them out."

Dustin Hoffman, in a candid interview with the American Film Institute about his role in the 1982 film Tootsie.

Tamed the shrew, but can't tame the Savages

New album. Lead singer Jehnnny Beth speaks about controlling that fear and their all-caps approach to making music and their shows

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

Savages are four London women whose punctuated attack on every song is every bit as vicious and thrilling as their name implies.

The band's recently released album, Silence Yourself feels like a tightly coiled musical manifesto of sexual politics and a dystopian future. While the band was en route to the States, we petitioned Jehnnny Beth for an email interview.

There's a lot about your approach that invokes fear, and a lot of it seems to be a fear of where humanity is heading. (One of the first lines a listener will hear on your debut album is that "The world's a dead, sorry hole") At what point did you realize this sort of unsettling feeling would be a thematic element to what Savages is all about?

Fear is one of the main characteristics of human behaviour. You can explain a lot of things when you understand how much fear controls in lots of different ways what people think and how they behave. If someone is angry, it is probably because he/she is scared. Learning how to control fear is one first step towards emancipation.

I've read that you have said your writing process is one that is more of stripping away than adding things. So what does a Savages song sound like when it's first brought into the rehearsal room?

There's never been a set way in which we write a song. There are usually too many ideas for just one song, so we select the best one and forget about the rest. We see it as a Darwinist process. If an idea is not strong enough, it will not survive.

The all-caps prose on the cover of the album is very powerful and also seems to relate to this same sort of unsettling feeling and seems to speak about where technology is taking us and sapping away our humanity. First of all, would you agree with that statement? And secondly, did those words ever land in any rough drafts of

Fear and fear itself

"Fear is one of the main characteristics of human behaviour. You can explain a lot of things when you understand how much fear controls."

Jehnnny Beth
Savages lead singer on the use of fear imagery in her lyrics

Odd couple

Can you share an anecdote about an incongruous pairing?

• Quote. "We played at Melted festival curated by Yoko Ono in London a few weeks ago. She came to see our soundcheck and walked onstage to say hi. ... She told us that she thought our gig shouldn't have been presented as an Iggy and the Stooges support. After she saw our soundcheck she said she knew that it should have been presented as a proper Savages show. I appreciated that she said that."

statement of sorts? Is this part of the notion of stripping away?

I wouldn't say it is about technology in particular. It is more about a general sentiment of self-dispersion, which I think is common to everyone and that I experience myself too. I think it would be wrong and reductive to direct this text towards one single particular meaning.

It was my intention to keep it poetic and open so people can make it their own.

You have posted other effective all-caps announcements, particularly the one outside your shows, discouraging people from tweeting, photographing etc. while you're performing. Are you seeing less phone glow from the crowd since posting this?

Yes, since we've put the signs up, I barely see any iPhones in the crowd during the performances.

I think people are dying for these kind of things to stop from happening, but it's easier to do it as a group than on your own.

It instantly changed the gigs! People started dancing, we have moshpits now. It's not like we are telling anyone off for not respecting the rules.

These are no rules, they are only guidance.

Zoey switches to singing this summer

She & Him. Deschanel talks inspiration and her acting career

During a summer tour with her musical duo She & Him, Zoey Deschanel has performed songs about tortured love and broken hearts. Since she wrote the songs with her partner, M. Ward, and she's recently gone through a divorce herself, she's obviously using her musical career to purge some emotions, right? Wrong, says Deschanel.

"That is not what I do," she says. "I think that lovelorn is a more interesting emotion; I tend to be interested in that emotion more than I tend to be interested in the emotion of happy content love, so my big influences have always been a lot of different things," said the singer-actress, who is taking a break from her hit sitcom The New Girl to focus on She & Him, which recently released their fourth album, Volume 3, in the spring.

Deschanel says she doesn't draw from her personal life when she creates, and instead relies on her own healthy imagination.

"It is the same thing for when people ask me, when I act, am I drawing from my own experience? Well no, I would run out of experiences really fast," she said. "I find things that are interesting, moving, maybe people I know or their emotions or movies or other songs, even just a thought or a feeling. Not that there is anything wrong with confessional song writing, there are plenty of people that do that who I admire. I think it is great; it just isn't how I do things."

Deschanel talked more about her inspirations, her acting career and She & Him in a recent phone interview.

How do you find the time to write music?

When I was first really writing music I was doing lots of movies and I would be on location and then I would take a guitar and maybe a little keyboard along with me. I would write in my trailer at lunch. A lot of the times I would write in the middle of the night or on weekends and then I would make demos and I would be working on my demos at work. I never really had a process that was contingent upon certain conditions.

Is it important for you to be able to merge singing and acting, with Jess bursting into song in New Girl, and singing the theme tune?

You know what's funny? I think I have only done that in like three episodes. The theme song, that was (show creator) Liz Merriweather's idea. I wrote the chorus production and the melody but I didn't write the lyrics to that. I find writing melodies much easier than writing lyrics. Lyrics are the hardest. But with New Girl, I am a producer on the show and I wanted the theme song to be a certain way. I am picky about theme songs. I got involved in the writing of it.

Do you think that New Girl has increased the exposure of She & Him?

I don't know. There was actually a certain point where I did movies but I was doing a lot more music and there was a certain point where a lot of people didn't know I was an actor and only knew She & Him, and there were certain countries where I know they know She & Him more than they know me. So that is always interesting to hear. I think I always notice. I don't really know until I go out on tour with it this time. I know that you would always get the people that would come to a She & Him show because they like my movies or something but however somebody comes to it, I don't really mind.

How was it directing the video for your latest single, I Could Have Been Your Girl?

It was really fun. I have always wanted to direct, so I thought I might as well do it now. But then it was right after I'd wrapped New Girl and so I had to throw myself head first into it. But it was such a rewarding experience and I worked with such great people on the video.

Is directing something you would be interested in pursuing?

Yes, that is sort of where I hope to go. It is just an extension of a lot of other things that I love to do. It is a lot of decision making and collaborating and curating of ideas and I really, really adored it so I would love to do more.

Shark Attack (I Can See Them Circling)/The Mark Inside

Just as this Toronto band was about to release their new album, Dark Hearts Can Radiate White Light, singer and guitarist Chris Levoir passed away. The group is now giving away the entire record (which is very good) in his memory.

9/Föllakzoid

I've seen this Chilean band's music described as "alternative cosmic trance." It sounds more like Krautrock to me, but whatever. This track from the album entitled II is a brilliant driving song.

Low key wedding bells imminent for Berry

Halle Berry will reportedly marry her fiancé, Olivier Martinez, this weekend, according to E! News, though the location of the event is still a mystery. Berry and Martinez were spotted flying out of LAX earlier this week with Berry's daughter, Nahla, in tow. If Berry's interview with InStyle last year is any indication, it will be an intimate ceremony. "I do know it will be very small," she told the magazine. The couple, who have been engaged since March 2012, are expecting their first child together.

King of Queens star leaves Church of Scientology

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News in New York City

King of Queens and The Talk star Leah Remini has left the Church of Scientology. Apparently Remini, who has been a member of the church for many years, grew tired of the organization's habit of cutting off ties with people it deems "suppressive."

"It all began when Leah questioned the validity of excommunication of people," a source told the Post. "She is stepping back from a regime she thinks is corrupt. She thinks no religion should tear apart a family or abuse someone under the umbrella of 'religion.'" Apparently, at Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes's wedding, the actress asked politely where church leader David Miscavige's wife was. It must have been a loaded question, because Remini was slammed with years of auditing and "thought modification." Remini is reportedly considering going public, but wants to wait and see what the church is going to do, since they're rumoured to harass those who try to leave.

Remini can stay at my place if she needs to hide out. I am a strong supporter of religious freedom for sitcom stars.

Angelina Jolie

War, what is it good for? An Angelina Jolie movie, apparently

Angelina Jolie has her second project as a director all lined up. The actress and activist will be taking on Unbroken, a Second World War drama about former prisoner of war Louie Zamperini, according to Yahoo News. "I've had the privilege of spending a great deal of time with Louie Zamperini, who is a hero of mine, and now — I am proud to say — a dear friend," Jolie says in a statement. "I am deeply honoured to be telling his extraordinary story, and I will do my absolute best to give him the film he deserves." Oscar-winners Joel and Ethan Coen are writing the script, and Jolie was spotted in Hawaii this week scouting locations. Jolie's first film as a director,

In the Land of Blood and Honey, was released in 2011.

CALGARY STAMPEDE

Look ... up in the sky

For Metro

There aren't many people who get to see the Calgary Stampede grounds from 6,000 feet in the air and then, less than four minutes later, be standing on the chuckwagon track. Unless, of course, you are one of the members of the SkyHawks Canadian Forces parachute team.

The SkyHawks have been making the leap onto the grounds during the opening of the rodeo throughout the Stampede.

"There really isn't anything more Western Canadian than jumping into the Stampede," said Capt. Victor Mover.

Mover is one of the 14 members of the team that has come to Calgary to perform throughout the Stampede.

His first jump was a high school graduation gift in 1992, and, since then, has completed more than 850 jumps.

The most memorable jumps for Mover have been the ones where he gets to feel the thrill of the first jump all over again, like the first time his wife jumped with him. Or when his daughter took her first leap.

Although jumping for large crowds, like that at the Stampede, is still a thrill for Mover, he said remaining focused on the technical aspects of the jump is where all the jumpers thoughts should be at.

"The technical difficulty changes with every jump," Mover said.

With the jump to the Stampede grounds, the crew has to be finely tuned to determine many factors to ensure they hit their small mark on the chuckwagon track during the singing of O Canada at the start of the rodeo.

Earlier in the week, one of the members of the team suffered a serious leg injury after landing too hard, but SkyHawks officials were optimistic about his recovery.

While Mover said he has faced his own share of injuries, he hopes to still be jumping well into his 70s.

"I would consider stopping if it was not fun anymore," Mover said.

After the Stampede, Mover and the SkyHawks will be spending the rest of the summer touring the country from coast to coast, with one of their closest stops being the 2013 Alberta International Air Show in Lethbridge July 20-21.

Shawn Desman enjoys visiting the Calgary Stampede.
THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Nobody does it like you Calgary

Popular Canadian crooner Shawn Desman really, really loves Calgary. That's why he didn't know what to expect when he arrived this week for his concert.

When Desman was watching the flood coverage he didn't know if the show would go on, but is amazed by the fact the city and the Calgary Stampede was able to soldier on despite the devastating disaster.

"I didn't know what to expect," said Desman, whose single Nobody Does It Like You went gold in Canada in 2012. "I wasn't here during the flood, but I look at it now and it's amazing what they accomplished. I'm just so amazed at how the city came together and strangers were helping strangers and they really pulled it together."

Desman has been somewhat of a staple at the Calgary Stampede Coca-Cola Stage, where he loves performing and, of course, partaking in the festivities afterwards, especially the food. Desman enjoyed the deep fried Oreos last year but has doubts about trying the new deep fried butter this year.

"I love Calgary, I love the vibe this city has and the people, it's just such an amazing city to be in. And, besides that, I love the Stampede, the fried foods and stuff that is bad for you — and there are a lot of great looking women, which is also a plus for me."

And he has a message, not only for his fans, but for the city as a whole.

"I know it's been tough and I can't imagine going through what they have, but it will get better and tomorrow is a new day, so just keep your head up."

Ambassadors. Spreading the Stampede spirit

For Metro

The Calgary Stampede royalty were busy working the crowds at the grandstand all week, but before their time at The Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth began, the queen and princesses were in Montreal, bringing some "yahoo" spirit to the Lone Ranger movie premiere.

Decked out in their western duds, the ladies handed out white cowboy hats and bandanas at the premiere and invited people to come check out the Stampede.

"When we first got there, people weren't really sure how to accept us with our cowboy hats and stuff, we stood out for sure," said Stampede queen Jessica Williams.

"Most people who would come up ... (would ask) how we were doing with the flood.

It was kind of neat that news had spread and to see they were concerned about us."

Williams and princesses Danielle Kakoschke and Catherine Morneau were happy to spread the word about the Stampede in Montreal, but admittedly were also hoping to meet Johnny Depp at the Lone Ranger premiere.

"Unfortunately, (Depp) had another premiere to go to so he wasn't able to make it — unfortunately," Morneau, a Quebec native, said with a laugh.

Williams, Kakoschke and Morneau, along with their royal horses, Hawk, Snoopy and Kansas, performed and promoted western heritage during the Stampede.

"I'm really proud to be part of this and to be able to represent the Stampede," said Kakoschke, who was born and raised in Calgary. "It's really exciting."

Whether you are a dog lover or not, there is no denying the charm of the Calgary Stampede SuperDogs.

A Stampede favourite, the President's Choice SuperDogs returned with another high-paced, high-energy show.

And while the dogs range in size from tiny to giant, the smiles they leave on audience's faces are wide, according to dog handler Sherry Etifier.

"That's the best part, seeing how much everyone enjoys watching them because it takes their minds off of their everyday lives and lets them have some fun," she said.

"I get to come here and watch them just smile and laugh and have a great time."

And after what Calgary has gone through with the flooding, it couldn't come at a better time, she said.

"The city has been going through a rough time lately and upheaval with the floods

A crispy nacho is a happy (tasty) nacho

Corn and Steak Grilled Nachos. When they're nuked in the microwave, these little guys die a soggy death. Save a nacho from this sad ending with your barbecue

Before turning on the grill, make sure the baking sheet you plan to use fits on it with the lid down. If it doesn't, you can divide the ingredients into multiple smaller pans. The smaller pans also can be cooked in batches, if needed.

1. In a medium bowl, whisk together the adobo sauce, tomato paste, oil, garlic powder and salt. Add the steak and mix to coat thoroughly. Cover and refrigerate for at least 20 minutes and up to overnight.

2. When ready to cook, heat the grill to medium-high.

3. Rub the corn with a bit of canola oil, then set it on the

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp adobo sauce (from a can of chipotle chilies in adobo)
- 3 tbsp tomato paste
- 3 tbsp canola, plus extra
- 1 tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp kosher salt
- 9 oz beef sirloin, thinly sliced (can substitute pre-sliced "stir-fry" beef)
- 1 ear corn, husked
- 11-oz bag corn tortilla chips
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
- 1/2 pint cherry tomatoes, cut into quarters
- 1/3 cup pepperoncini, stemmed and thinly sliced
- 1/2 small red onion, diced

grill. Cook the corn, turning often, until lightly browned on all sides, about 2 to 3 minutes. Transfer the corn to a plate and set aside until cool enough to handle.

4. Meanwhile, use an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs to coat the grill grates with oil. Add the steak and grill for 1 to 2 minutes per side, or to desired doneness. Transfer to a plate and set aside. Leave grill on, but reduce the heat to low.

5. Arrange the tortilla chips in an even layer on a rimmed baking sheet. Spread the steak evenly over the chips.

6. Cut the corn kernels from the cobs. To do this, stand the ear on its wide end, then use a knife to saw down the length of the sides. Scatter the corn kernels over the steak and chips, then scatter the cheese over that. Set the baking sheet on the grill, cover the grill and cook for 7 to 10 minutes, or until the cheese is melted.

7. Remove the baking sheet from the grill, then scatter the tomatoes, pepperoncini and diced onion over the other toppings. Serve immediately.

Liquid Assets

Staple of summertime

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Sorry, spirit fans, you don't have the monopoly on mixology. Innovative wine lovers have been adding extras to vino for centuries, creating inspired alternatives to drinking it neat.

The Spanish came up with the idea of sangria: A blend of red wine, liqueur and fruit named after their term for blood because of its dark colour. Arguably the first wine cooler, Canadians are just cluing in to how easy it is to make — not to mention how well it goes with summer menus.

My basic recipe is meant to be played with, so have fun experimenting. Use whatever fruit turns you on (I start with watermelon, blueberries and raspberries) and an inexpensive Spanish red or a value-priced, fruit-forward alternative like Lindeman's juicy 2012 Cawarra Shiraz Cabernet ($8.95 to $10.99) from Australia.

Peter's Simple Sangria:

- Ice cubes
- 750 ml chilled red wine
- 100 ml orange liqueur
- 500 ml gingerale
- 200 ml lemonade
- Fruit
- Sugar

Grab a clear glass pitcher and toss in some ice cubes. Add all the liquids, then the fruit. Stir. Give it a sip and add sugar to taste. Enjoy!

MLB

Ohio tough on Blue Jays, Dickey

R.A. Dickey's knuckleball can be puzzling. Same for the Blue Jays.

Toronto was held to two hits by Danny Salazar — making his MLB debut — and the Jays lost 4-2 to the Indians on Wednesday in Cleveland.

After winning 11 straight, the Jays have gone 6-11 and remain stuck in last place in the American League East.

Dickey (8-10) lost command in the sixth with the game tied 1-1, when he hit a batter, walked two and gave up an RBI single to Lonnie Chisenhall. A year ago at the all-star break, Dickey was 12-1 and on his way to an NL Cy Young Award. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jeter makes his return to Yankees

Derek Jeter was back, and the New York Yankees felt a whole lot better.

At least until he needed to make an early exit.

The Yankees captain singled on his first pitch of the season, then was pulled for a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning with a tight right quadriceps in an 8-4 victory Thursday over the Kansas City Royals.

Jeter scored a run and went 1-for-4 with an RBI groundout as the designated hitter in his return from a nine-month layoff from a broken ankle.

Stann retires from the Octagon

Brian (All American) Stann, a former WEC champion and decorated war hero, has retired from mixed martial arts at the age of 32.

A former WEC light-heavyweight champion, Stann went on campaign in the UFC as a middleweight. He returned to the 205-pound ranks his last time out to face Brazilian veteran Wanderlei (The Axe Murderer) Silva in March in Japan.

Stann (12-6) lost three of his last four, admittedly against tough opposition in Silva, Michael Bisping and Chael Sonnen. He defeated Alessio Sakara during that run. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stamps, Als looking for bounce-back week

CFL. Coming off losses, both Calgary and Montreal faced with serious concerns

Alouettes quarterback Anthony Calvillo was sacked seven times last week by Bryant Turner and the Blue Bombers defence. PAUL CHIASSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two potentially vulnerable teams clash Friday when the Calgary Stampeders visit the Montreal Alouettes.

The Alouettes are coming off a woeful 19-11 loss at home to Winnipeg last week that raised questions on whether the team is in sync with its new coaching staff.

Calgary blew a second-half lead to lose 36-21 to Saskatchewan last week and lost starting quarterback Drew Tate and a few players on defence to injury, making Kevin Glenn the starter against Montreal.

Both 1-1 teams will be looking to bounce back when they meet at Percival Molson Stadium.

The Stampeders are probably the best-equipped team in the league to deal with an injury to their starting quarterback. Glenn played most of last season with Tate out and went 9-5, and replaced him again for Calgary's run to the Grey Cup game.

"He's probably the best backup in the CFL," said Montreal rush end John Bowman. "He brings experience, knowledge of the game and he reads situations good."

On the other side of the ball there are many questions. Defensive backs Keenan MacDougall (groin), Jamar Wall (ankle) and Derrius Brooks (ankle) and lineman Ben d'Aguilar (knee) are all out. Quincy Butler, Keon Raymond, Yannick

Carter and Kevin Huntley will dress.

Raymond will see his first action this season.

"They (the Alouettes) have a lot of veteran guys there and I'm pretty sure they're going to rebound and play hard," he said. "Their coaching staff is trying to get used to the league and it's a big difference, but they have veteran guys like Anthony Calvillo trying to put their imprint on things."

"I seriously doubt them coming out and misfiring again."

Als quarterback Calvillo had the look of a man trying to quell a rebellion this week, saying the new coaching staff was not at fault and that the players have to buy into their system and perform up to expectations.

The offence looked lost against the Bombers, managing only nine first downs in the game. Calvillo was sacked seven times.

That raised debate on his relationship with new coach Dan Hawkins and offensive co-ordinator Mike Miller after five years playing under quarterback guru Marc Trestman. Calvillo has always sat by himself on the bench between drives, but that suddenly has become an issue.

So have his frequent visible signs of exasperation at sacks, broken plays and missed passes.

"Now things are getting more emphasized," said Calvillo. "The new coaching staff might not be used to it and I'm going to adjust to that because I know how important my body demeanour is to our team." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kovalchuk walks from deal with Devils

NHL. Russian sniper retires to return home; 12 years, $77M left on big contract

When the New Jersey Devils signed Ilya Kovalchuk to a contract that eventually became a 15-year deal worth $100 million US, it stunned the NHL.

But that was nothing compared to Kovalchuk's decision to retire and walk away from the final 12 years and $77 million of it.

Kovalchuk's announcement Tuesday to return home to Russia came several months after the superstar considered staying there in the wake of the NHL lockout. The 30-year-old said in a statement that he has thought for a long time about moving home for good.

"Though I decided to return this past season, (general manager Lou Lamoriello) was aware of my desire to go back home and have my family there with me," Kovalchuk said. "The most difficult thing for me is to leave the New Jersey Devils, a great

$77M left on the table

Here are the remaining yearly salary amounts Ilya Kovalchuk will be giving up:

2013-14: $11,300,000
2014-15: $11,300,000
2015-16: $11,600,000
2016-17: $11,800,000

2017-18: $10,000,000
2018-19: $7,000,000
2019-20: $4,000,000
2020-21: $1,000,000
2021-22: $1,000,000
2022-23: $1,000,000

organization that I have a lot of respect for, and our fans that have been great to me."

Kovalchuk had 417 goals and 399 assists in 816 games over 11 NHL seasons spent with the Atlanta Thrashers and Devils. He was the first-overall pick of the Thrashers in 2001 and was a face of that franchise before being traded to New Jersey in 2010.

"After many conversations with Ilya over the past year on his desire to retire from the National Hockey League, Ilya's decision became official today," Lamoriello said in a statement. "On behalf of the entire organization, I wish Ilya and his family all the best in their future endeavours."

Kovalchuk is free to play in Russia's KHL and reports from Russian news agencies indicated he will officially sign with SKA St. Petersburg on Friday.

Kovalchuk's original deal with the Devils was for 17 years and $102 million. It was ruled cap circumvention by the NHL because Kovalchuk would have been 44 years old when it was over.

The Devils must forfeit their 2014 first-round pick as punishment for the circumvention after they opted to keep their selections in 2012 and 2013. They will also be charged $250,000 against the salary cap through 2024-25 as a result of Kovalchuk's retirement.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You are not usually the trusting sort but you seem determined to see only the best in people today. Good for you but don't believe everyone.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

You have so much work to finish before the weekend that you may be at a loss to know how to get it all done. Don't worry, the planets will provide. All you have to do is make a start and then keep going.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Wherever you go and whatever you do today people will greet you like a long lost friend. You must be doing something right to get this kind of response, so carry on.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

It seems you have been rather obsessive about someone. For some reason you have been thinking about this person night and day. Is that healthy? Probably not. Think about something else.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Friends will rally around and make life easy for you today. What have you done to deserve this kind of assistance? Probably nothing much but you do have a knack for attracting people.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

It might be wise to leave your credit card at home today because if you use it once you won't know when to stop. Use cash only and limit yourself to a certain amount. If you haven't got enough, too bad.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

People you do business with today may not be talkative but from the look in their eyes and the way they position themselves, you will know what they are thinking. You read body language so well.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

It's good to be open-minded but that does not mean you can allow people with silly theories to waste your time. The Sun in Cancer promotes broader thinking but some thinking is too outrageous to take seriously.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

No matter how vulnerable you may feel at the moment, you need to be around people because it is only through personal contact that you can rise above this negative phase.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Make a point of being calm today because what happens over the weekend will try your patience to the limit.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You are desperate to be on the move and will be impatient with people who think or act too slowly. Your journey will be a lot more pleasant if you relax and stop looking at your watch so often. Time doesn't matter.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you are confused about something, you must speak up. There is nothing wrong in admitting that you don't "get" it and it's unlikely you are the only one. You will be doing people a favour. SALLY BROMPTON
